

Job Protections for FEMA Reservists

Information about the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act (USERRA) and the Civilian Reservist Emergency Workforce of 2022.

What is the CREW Act?

The Civilian Reservist Emergency Workforce (CREW) Act of 2022 amended the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (Stafford Act) and the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act (USERRA) to prohibit discrimination by civilian employers based on membership as a FEMA Reservist, and/or service as a FEMA Reservist when deployed to disasters and emergencies, or when training for such, on behalf of FEMA.

What is USERRA?

USERRA protects against discrimination in civilian employment based on membership in, and service in, the uniformed services. USERRA's definitions of "uniformed services" and "service in the uniformed services" now includes FEMA's Reservists, thanks to the CREW Act.

USERRA applies to all public and private employers in the United States and safeguards all categories of employees including executive, managerial, and professional employees. It also protects temporary, part-time, probationary, and seasonal employees.

What are the job protections as a FEMA Reservist?

One of the major protections offered by USERRA is the ability to leave your full-time employment to perform service in the uniformed services, and then return to that employment upon completion of your service.

USERRA also provides certain protections while deployed. The employer may not require Reservists to use accrued vacation, annual, or similar leave during a deployment. USERRA also requires employers to continue to provide health and pension plan coverage for a specific period of time.

Conditions for reemployment after a FEMA deployment:

To be eligible for reemployment at another job following a FEMA deployment, Reservists must meet these five conditions:

- Hold a civilian job besides the Reservist appointment;
- Have given written or verbal notice to the civilian employer prior to leaving the job for Reservist training or deployment except when precluded by FEMA necessity;
- Not have exceeded the 5-year cumulative limit on periods of FEMA service (note: this is per employer);
- Have been released from service under conditions other than dishonorable for military reservists and National Guard (note: FEMA is determining how this applies to Reservists); and
- Report back to the civilian job in a timely manner or submit a timely application for reemployment.
